The History of Modern Art in Iraq (1917 – 2003)

Ali Salman

Following WWI, and the English's (United Kingdom) arrival to Iraq, and the establishment of the modern Iraqi state, many artists, scholars, and photographers came to Iraq along with the British soldiers. They were very impressed by the Iraqi arts of drawings, furniture designs, and especially the architecture of home facades which are called (Baghdadi Shanasheel). These traditional arts connect the past of Iraqi and the civilizations that appeared across its land, and the modern. The house facades would impress these western artists who took with them these arts to Britain and other European countries. Many books were published about these traditions in addition to photographed Atlases in the field. In the latter part of the twentieth century, many artists developed these arts and added new touches to them influenced by the cultures of other nations they interacted with such as Easter and Western Europe, and Russia. Especially for the students who studied abroad at foreign universities, as well as who went on cultural and artistic exchanges and missions

Some of the most notable artists are Jawad Salim, Faiq Hasan, Abdul Ghani Hekmat, Ismael Fatah Al Turk, Laila Al Attar, Alaa Bashir and many others. These artists had many great achievements including the Tahrir (Independence) Commemoration, The Missing Soldier, The Martyr's Memorial, Baghdad Clock Tower, and other works and achievements that denote Iraqi modern and old traditions.

From a linguistic perspective, Asmaa, is the plural of Ism (meaning name). It is the word given to material and non-material things. Arabs have named their daughters Asmaa since the Jahiliya period. The name symbolizes transcendence and also, when the hamzeh (last letter) in Arabic is dropped, it becomes Asma which means the purest, the highest, and the most valuable.

This is my family tree. Each heart represents a family member. I left Syria six years ago and I miss them. I hope to return and be with them when it is more comfortable.

I came to America on April 6th 2016. I felt bad because I felt like coming here was only for me and my immediate family. I felt lonely and I could not concentrate because verything was new.

Being away from one's country is one of the harshest feelings experienced by humans who are far away from their loved ones, and homeland. There are situations that cause one to leave their homeland in search of a safe haven and stability. However, there is always a sense of hope nestled in your chest to return one day to the motherland.

Oh you may have left home emigrating, your heart beating the love of dear ares. Today after being distant you have learned... That there is no like until there is return to Damascus.

*University of Baghdad:

- The University was designed by German architect Walter Gropis whereas construction began in 1963 A.D. The university was designed to accommodate 6800 students. The campus was expanded in 1982 AD to accommodate 20000 students by architects Hisham Ashkory and Robert Ony.
- Upon entering the university of Baghdad, there is a very high arc that does not connect at the top. This design by Walter Gropis was meant to signify the following:
 - First: Reflect the high tech (at the time) to make a nonconnected arc. Second: A scientific symbolism meaning that knowledge and scholarship are infinite.
- The University of Baghdad is one of the biggest universities in Baghdad and lies in the heart of the Capital, in the Rasafeh district, surrounded by the Tigris River from three sides. The university has twenty four colleges, three institutes, and nine centers.
- During my childhood I would always go with my aunt (she was a professor at the University) to the university. I userd to love the place, and my wish was to graduate from there. I was able to achieve my wish, Thanks to God, after completing my studies there and graduating.

I miss you mother, but this life has promised to be brutal, unfair, and bitter. It took my mom away as she fought for her life and almost prevailed... But with fraud and deceit, it planted its dagger, slowly penetrating through her body, her head through her feet.

My mother tree started leaning, reaching out to me with her branches, getting closer and closer everyday as life advances. Since that day, I could not grow and never did my mother tree get straight. We remained together like conjoined twins. No life for me without her and no death will ever take her away from my life.
